

until after the adjournment of the Legislature.

The Committee, therefore stands adjourned sine die.

This announcement created no little surprise among the spectators, and there was immediately a rush for the Committee to understand the cause of their sudden termination of the investigation.

Many believe that it had closed for good and that the Committee would never meet again. It was, however, so arranged that they could never come together again, and that the Committee might just as well be dead.

Both Senator Lusk and Senator O'Connor denied this report, and the latter said that as soon as the Legislature had adjourned the Committee would get together and hold several sessions until the whole matter should be finished.

Dr. Parkhurst and Charles S. Smith shook hands with the members of the Committee before they went away, and manifested the most cordial spirit. It was said, however, that there might be a change in counsel before the Committee met again.

It was apparent from the remarks made by Mr. Sutherland, that he had been thoroughly fooled by the attack which had been made upon him, and that he regarded the whole matter as a report in question, and that the wisest plan would have been to ignore it entirely.

EMIGRANT COMMITS SUICIDE

Schmidt Contemplated Sailing on La Gasconne This Morning.

Instead He Put a Bullet in His Head at the Hotel Gruettli.

John Rudolph Schmidt, thirty-six years of age, a native of St. Gall, Switzerland, committed suicide this morning by shooting himself through the forehead in his room in the Gruettli Hotel, 63 Greenwich street, kept by Martin Gasser & Co.

Schmidt came to the hotel last Sunday night, saying that he had been farming near Chicago, and was going home to his friends. He had a steerage passage ticket on the French liner La Gasconne, which sailed to-day at 9:30.

Schmidt had his baggage taken to the steamer pier last night, and left orders to be called early this morning. The porter rapped at Schmidt's door at 6:30, but received no answer.

After further rapping the door was forced, and Mr. Schmidt found lying dead on the bed with a 3-caliber pistol firmly clamped in his right hand. The body was cold.

Schmidt had on his trousers, but no coat or vest. His shirt was unbuttoned at the throat.

The proprietors of the hotel are unable to assign any reason why Schmidt should have killed himself. They said that he seemed to be in good spirits, and that he was regular in his visits to the hotel.

He was somewhat reticent and made no friends among the hotel guests. He was cheerful and pleasant enough, nor did he complain of any sickness.

Schmidt left a watch, a gold and silver watch and chain and a few trinkets besides his baggage at the steamer pier. He was not seen to leave the hotel, and the body will not be sent to the Morgue. A permit for its removal to an undertaker's has been issued by the Coroner.

HORSES FARE WORST.

They Suffer Terribly in the Mountain March of Coxeyites.

Bad Roads and a Five Hours' Tramp Before the Army To-Day.

Men in Fairly Good Spirits, but Dreading Their Prospect.

(By Associated Press.) GRANTSVILLE, Md., April 14.—The members of the Army of the Commonsense passed a fairly comfortable night, considering it from their standpoint. The trip of the past three days has been a wonderful test of physical endurance of man and beast. The men have borne up bravely, even attempting to keep up their spirits with song and jest, while waiting in snow and mud, with the worst penetrating their rags.

The horses have been the greatest sufferers. From the start two horses have been attached to the commissary, hand and supply wagons. The long march had told on the animals before Uniontown was reached, but when the climbing of the mountains had begun the poor creatures were barely able to struggle along. It was thought at one time yesterday that the wagons could not be brought to this town.

The panorama horse gave out completely and was removed, and the Texas pony, Princess, used by Oklahoma Sam, was relieved.

All day Thursday the army struggled along on the National Pike. Each of the five companies was in the rear of a wagon. Thus, as the march progressed, the horses dropped further and further to the rear, suffering the forces to an unusual degree.

The men are in good spirits to-day, but they have experienced the discomforts of mountain travel, and they rather dread the tramp of fourteen miles to Frostburg, in a company of the forces to a bad condition. Thus, with the other drawbacks to speedy traveling, will result in a company of the forces to a bad condition. 'T WAS MRS. EMMA COPELAND.

She Was the "Mysterious" Woman Who Visited Magee.

Has Married Daughters and Is an Old Friend of His.

It has been discovered that the "mysterious woman" who visited the law offices of William M. Mullen and went out to lunch with Managing Clerk Joseph T. Magee at noon of the day when the typewriter, Martha J. Fuller, was shot through the brain was Mrs. Emma Copeland, 25 Third street, Chicago.

Mrs. Copeland formerly lived in Brooklyn, is the wife of a business man, the mother of two grown-up daughters and the family were friends of Magee. Mrs. Copeland returned to Chicago by the Sunday evening train twenty-four hours after the shooting.

Magee was seen in cell 68 at the Tombs, this morning by an "Evening World" reporter. He smiled in an amused way at the story told about his "mysterious" visitor, only nodding assent to the statement that it was Mrs. Copeland and that she was a woman past middle age.

"I have no complaint to make against anybody," said he. "I am treated with courtesy here by all. Of course, the police are a little inquisitive, and being charged with an awful crime is not pleasant. But I am philosophical, and I don't mind being in here. I do not refuse to talk about my case to be discouraged. I am a widow, and I have no counsel, and I must obey my lawyers."

Dr. O'Sullivan, of Magee's counsel, said: "I don't know if Copeland is the name of Magee's caller. All I know is that she told me that her visit was a purely business one. She had no connection whatever with the events that followed."

"I will add this, that we don't care a rap what is said against Magee. We shall prove affirmatively that Miss Copeland committed suicide and show why she did it."

The story of Mrs. Copeland's visit to Magee's office was first published in the "Evening World" early this week. She was visiting her old neighbor after the death of her husband, who had here she presented to Magee the two photographs found in his drawer after the shooting. These photographs were of two daughters.

One of these daughters, in an interview with her home in Chicago, is quoted as saying that her mother saw Magee's revolver in the drawer when he opened it to show the photograph in it. This daughter is credited with saying that her mother went to the theatre with Magee, and that she saw him there. The tragedy and declined an invitation from Magee to go to the theatre Saturday night, the night of the shooting. "Blue Jeans" was at the Amphion, Brooklyn, that week.

One woman, who says that Magee invited her mother to the theatre in Miss Fuller's presence after their return from Chicago, said that she saw Magee and Joseph and Richard Burton, Mullen's office, agree that the "mysterious" woman was the wife of a client. The young man in the office says that, so far as he was able to judge, Magee's manner toward the "mysterious caller" was that of a lawyer to a client.

MADELINE ALLEN BAILED.

Charged with Sending Threatening Letters to Cadieux.

Madeline Allen, whom Victor Cadieux, of 127 West Seventy-seventh street, accuses of having written threatening letters to him, was bailed to-day by Justice McMahon in the Jefferson Market Police Court this morning and admitted to $500 bail for examination on next Tuesday afternoon.

Victor Cadieux runs a "fake" furniture place at the above address, and was exposed by "Nellie Bly" in "The World" as a swindler.

March 18, His wife aids him in the scheme. Allen is a well-known character in the papers that a lot of men, women, furniture and paintings must be sold immediately and at a great reduction.

The alleged magnificent furniture and tapestries consists of the cheapest kind of plush and cotton and imitations. In many instances the unsuspecting purchaser is deceived.

Miss Allen, who is about
